

Loftus Peak Global Disruption Fund

Global Change. Listed Investments. Daily Liquidity.

Monthly Investor Letter
June 2018

Traditional business models are being disrupted as connectivity, networks and the sharing economy impact all industries – retail, transport, energy and banking to name a few. Loftus Peak invests to generate returns from these major secular shifts. The Fund's geographical and sectoral diversification lowers the concentration risk inherent in the typical Australian portfolio with its heavy skew toward banks, resources and the Australian dollar.

Portfolio Contributors and Detractors

The past few months have been frenetic in terms of the pace of change, with big industries including US healthcare, Chinese retail and datacenters globally under attack as new products which will change underlying business dynamics emerge.

Amazon will acquire PillPack, an online pharmacy for US$1 billion. The company distributes medication into daily packs according to the customer's prescription. PillPack's expertise combined with Amazon's distribution capabilities could significantly disrupt the pharmaceutical industry, but the payoff is a while away.

Alibaba may have a stronger rival in JD, China's second largest retailer, after Google invested US$550 million and added the company to its online shopping service in June.

Nvidia is being challenged by AMD as the two (and Intel) battle for dominance in data centres, which provide the critical infrastructure for many businesses.

While Nvidia's Tesla and Volta architecture is the benchmark for performance, AMD Epyc server systems are becoming an option after just over a year on the market. Intel will not cede ground easily.

Tesla reached its target of 7,000 Model X and Model S produced in a week, with the goal of 5,000 Model 3 cars in sight. This is a milestone for the company, but there are questions about whether it has cut corners. It is a very small position for Loftus Peak investors.

The Australian dollar depreciated 1.9% over the month against the US dollar, which is favourable to our USD holdings. The Fund carried a foreign currency exposure of 98.3% in June.
